Rev. H W. Boscher in the Christian Union. The notion that inspiration ceased with the close of the new Testament canon has. nothing to sustain it in the New Testament. It is, on the contrary, directly contradictory to the explicit teachings of the New Testa ment. The doctrine that God is a self-revealing tiod, that he directly and immediately communicates himself to men; that it is possible not only for the soul to address God but also to recievethe divine response. that this possibility is not the privilege of afew rare, sainted geniuses, but the prerogative of humanity, that the normal and healthy state of soul is that of constant spiritual commun- foreign remark to a boy that stood by the counion with God and of divine life through the | ter lazily turning the leaves of a lot of sheet broading, inspiring influence of God-this is the bright consummate truth of New Testament theology If anything could be clearly and explicitly taught, then is taught the doctrine that the inspiration of man by God Is not episodical, exceptional, historically remote, confined to one little province the size

He had not in mind the personal comfort of health, but the basis it affords of dong well any sort of work. And not only is it the basis of all achievement but it surrow into the achievement as a qual ity Where is this mysterious relation be tween bests and mind that physical conditum 'exemes mental characteristic? Man is one or rather is now linked into uch indivisible onenegs that you cannot say Here the body ends and the mind begins. This is mental, that is spiritual. A quality runs throughout the whole camut of our being If a man - sound and healthy in his body, if he is weak or sickly, he will be sick or sound from his lones to his aspirations, You cannot measure the degree and persistence with which the bodily tone asserts it. self through the whole range of one's work. We talk about the mind trumphing over the lowly, but it seldom triumphs to such a degree that a sick body yields sound mindwork It will show the marks of the struggle, and, if it is strong and cheery, it will be a cheer and strength wrested out of weakness, not that which bubbles up from health and vigor. This is a matter of great inportance-whether we preach out of thorough, ingrained healthiness, or preach as though we were well not being so. We cannot triumph over Nature Her color will strike Posters, through our cheery and energetic speech, with mevitable suggestion of pain or weak ness And sed vitalized blood will tinge the utmost thoughts of the mind. There is no doubt whatever as gathered from his works, but Shakespeare was a man of most robust health; and Mr. Carlyle well knows that his life-long dyspepsia is a considerable ingredient of his thought.

BUTTONS FROM HANCOUK'S COAT. Yesterday a well-dressed man-but this is not a fashion article; what's the use of describing a man's dress? Anyway, the man entered a store, and taking a brass button from his pocket he handed it to a bystander and remarked:

"Rather a valuable relic. This button was shot from General Hancock's coat at Gettysburg. My father was on Hancock's staff, and

"I should think that it is valuable," said the man, examining it. "From Hancock's coat? Well, I declare, What'll you take for it? Excuse me, sir. I should not have asked such a

No offense, sir. I wouldn't sell the relic, of course, as it is bound to me by more than one tie My father is dead"-and the man looked away while the other party turned and made a "No, I wouldn't sell it," continued the man, 'but as I am in straightened circumstances I am going to the pawn shop and pawn it." "Don't do that. Let me take it."

The money was handed over, and after the 352 Lyon, Mrs. Wm. P. 5-6 Washington relic man had carefully taken down the address of the capitalist he walked out. About five of Vermont, one each 1.500 years, and one minutes afterward the clerk in a neighboring relatively small becode - the Hebrew nation store entered and exclaimed : "See here, fellers; I recken I've got the boss relie, a button shot from General Hancock's coat at the battle of tietty-burg " He then unwrapped a lot of oil "Where did you get it " asked the man who
